

Title: Observing Various Strains of Related Sporeforming Bacillus with SEM

Abstract: This is a preliminary experiment to observe the spores produced by various strains of Bacillus isolated from different sources using SEM. The spores were observed in order to see if those that are closely related produced spores that are similar in shape, size, and texture. The current data suggests that further research is needed.